SCOOP: DHS plans first removals of immigrants under revived “Remain in Mexico” policy

The Trump administration plans to soon remove at least 400 individuals to Mexico, including families and children, in what would be the first known restart of the controversial Remain in Mexico policy, three people familiar with the plans told MS NOW.

Hundreds of individuals of varying nationalities will be transported as early as Tuesday from immigration facilities in Texas and Arizona to Mexican border cities as they await a U.S. court date, according to two of the people familiar with the plans.
