

BACKGROUND

I. Factual Background

A. Francesca Albanese and the Cali Family

Plaintiffs L.C. and Massimiliano Cali are the daughter and husband, respectively, of Francesca Albanese, an Italian citizen. Compl. [Dkt. #1] ¶ 1. Albanese is an “international legal scholar and recognized expert in areas of human rights and the Middle East.” Id. ¶ 17. Albanese’s husband, Cali, is an economist with the World Bank and an Italian citizen. Id. Albanese’s minor daughter, L.C., is a United States citizen. Id. ¶ 11.

The family lived in the United States from 2012 to 2015 while Cali was stationed at the World Bank headquarters in Washington, D.C. Id. ¶ 18. During that time, they purchased a home, opened a U.S. bank account, and took out a mortgage. Id. L.C. was born in Washington, D.C. in 2013. Id. ¶ 18. The family left the United States in 2015 when the World Bank relocated Cali outside the United States, but they kept their D.C. residence and routinely travel to the United States. Id. ¶ 20. The family currently resides in Tunisia. Id.

As a public intellectual and scholar, Albanese has written and spoken widely on controversial human rights issues, including most notably the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. Mem. in Supp. of Mot. for Prelim. Inj. (“P.I. Br.”) [Dkt. #3-1] at 6–9. In April 2022, the United Nations Human Rights Council (“UNHRC”) appointed Albanese as the “Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967.” Id. at 7; Compl. ¶ 21. In this position, Albanese reports to the UNHRC and the United Nations General Assembly on human rights issues in the Palestinian territory and engages in independent scholarship and advocacy. Id. at 7. She has spoken at universities in the United States and Europe and has appeared on a wide range of media outlets. Compl. ¶ 23. Since 2022, she has also published two books on the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. Id. ¶ 24. According to U.S. Secretary of State Marco Rubio, Albanese has “spewed unabashed antisemitism, expressed support for terrorism, and open contempt for the United States, Israel, and the West.” Compl., Ex. B. (“Rubio Statement”) [Dkt. #1-10] at 1.

In her role as a Special Rapporteur, Albanese has authored recommendations to the International Criminal Court (“ICC”) regarding possible war crimes charges stemming from the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. The ICC is an international institution located in the Netherlands that provides its member states a forum for the prosecution of international crimes, including genocide, crimes against humanity, and war crimes. Compl. ¶¶ 26, 29. The ICC was created by the 1998 Rome Statute. Id. ¶ 26. The United States signed the Rome Statute, but the Senate never ratified it. Id. ¶ 28.

Albanese has no formal role with the ICC. Id. ¶ 31. However, the United Nations and the ICC have agreed to “cooperate closely . . . and consult each other on matters of mutual interest.” Opp’n to Mot. for Prelim. Inj. (“Opp’n”) [Dkt. #26] at 10 (quoting United Nations Office of Legal Affairs, “Negotiated Relationship Agreement between the International Criminal Court and the United Nations,” <https://perma.cc/23M4-DY4J>). In July 2025, Albanese authored a report in which she “urge[d] the [ICC] and national judiciaries to investigate and prosecute corporate executives and/or corporate entities” for their role in alleged war crimes in the Middle East. Id. at 9 (quoting F. Albanese, From economy of occupation to economy of genocide, ¶ 96, U.N. Doc. A/HRC/59/23 (July 2, 2025), <https://docs.un.org/en/A/HRC/59/23>). The report specifically mentions U.S. companies—including Lockheed Martin, Caterpillar Inc., and Chevron—and accuses them of furthering “apartheid” and “settler-colonial destruction.” Id. at 9–10 (quoting Albanese, From economy of occupation, ¶¶ 32, 36, 43–45).

B. Executive Order 14203

On February 6, 2025, President Donald J. Trump issued Executive Order No. 14203 (“E.O. 14203” or “the Order”), entitled “Imposing Sanctions on the International Criminal Court.” 90 Fed. Reg. 9369 (Feb. 6, 2025); see also Compl., Ex. A [Dkt. #1-9]. Promulgated pursuant to the President’s authority under the International Emergency Economic Powers Act (“IEEPA”), 50 U.S.C. § 1701 et seq., E.O. 14203 declares that “any effort by the ICC to investigate, arrest, detain, or prosecute” nationals of the United States or other major allies “constitutes an unusual and extraordinary threat to the national security and foreign policy of the United States.” E.O. 14203 at 1. The Order specifically references the ICC’s actions against Israeli government officials over alleged war crimes in the Middle East. Id.

Pursuant to the President’s authority under IEEPA, E.O. 14203 authorizes extensive sanctions against foreign persons who have “directly engaged in” or assisted the ICC in these efforts. Id. § 1(a)(ii)(A). Absent an applicable exception, E.O. 14203 prohibits U.S. persons from providing “funds, goods, or services by, to, or for the benefit of” any foreign person designated under the Order. Id. §§ 3(a), (b). Individuals who engage in transactions with designated persons are subject to civil fines and criminal penalties under IEEPA. See 50 U.S.C. § 1705; 31 C.F.R. § 510.701.

C. The Designation of Albanese

On July 9, 2025, Secretary of State Rubio designated Albanese, pursuant to E.O. 14203, as a foreign national who has “directly engaged with the [ICC] in efforts to investigate, arrest, detain, or prosecute nationals of the United States or Israel, without the consent of those two countries.” Rubio Statement. Secretary Rubio cited Albanese’s service as a U.N. Special Rapporteur, including her “recommend[ation] that the ICC, without a legitimate basis, issue arrest warrants targeting Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and former Defense Minister Yoav Gallant,” as well as her “writing threatening letters to dozens of entities worldwide, including major American companies” and “recommending the ICC pursue investigations and prosecutions of these companies and their executives.” Id. at 1–2.

The U.S. Department of Treasury’s Office of Foreign Assets Control (“OFAC”) subsequently implemented the designation by adding Albanese to OFAC’s Specially Designated National (“SDN”) List. Opp’n at 11 (citing U.S. Dep’t of Treasury, Off. Of Foreign Assets Control, “International Criminal Court-related Designation,” <https://perma.cc/QEP3-VWB8>). As a result of her designation, U.S. persons may not, at risk of civil and criminal liability, engage in any transaction of funds, goods, or services with or for the benefit of Albanese. E.O. 14203 § 3. The Order also bars “immigrant [or] nonimmigrant entry into the United States” by Albanese and her “immediate family members.” Id. § 4.

On August 22, 2025, OFAC issued two licenses limiting the impact of Albanese’s designation. The first permits certain transactions “ordinarily incident and necessary to” the upkeep or sale of the family's residence in the United States, while restricting all proceeds of any sale to an "interest-bearing blocked account." Compl., Ex. C ("Property License") [Dkt. #1-11] § I–II. The second permits transactions "ordinarily incident and necessary to . . . Albanese's role as the parent and legal guardian of [L.C.]" Compl., Ex. D ("Parental License") [Dkt. #1-12] § I; see also Decl. of M. Rasmussen [Dkt. #26-1] at ¶¶ 5–9 (discussing scope of Parental License).

D. The Aftermath of Albanese's Designation

As a result of her designation, Albanese has suffered severe ramifications. She is barred from entering the United States, which prevents her from traveling to the headquarters of the United Nations. Compl. ¶ 69. Albanese has also been "fully unbanked and cannot make or receive payments through the financial system." Id. ¶ 68. Soon after her designation, Albanese was removed from her joint U.S. bank account with her husband, Decl. of M. Cali [Dkt. #30-1] ¶ 7, and she has subsequently been denied bank accounts at several European banks, Id. ¶ 12. Moreover, due to Albanese's designation, her husband's employer-sponsored health insurer has "refused to pay [her] health expenses." Id. ¶ 23. Several U.S. universities severed their longstanding ties with Albanese, including Georgetown and Columbia. Compl. ¶ 70.

Plaintiffs allege they too have suffered harms because of Albanese's designation. As an "immediate family member[]" of an SDN, Cali is barred from entering the United States. E.O. 14203 § IV. He therefore cannot travel to the headquarters of his employer, the World Bank. Compl. ¶ 69. Indeed, due to his travel restrictions and "ongoing external pressure resulting from the sanctions," Cali Decl. ¶ 18, Cali has been suspended from existing positions at the World Bank and faces “severely constrained” options for future positions within the organization, id. Cali also cannot travel to Washington, D.C. to supervise the upkeep or sale of his and his wife’s property. Compl. ¶ 71. Prior to the issuance of the Property License, OFAC blocked an attempted sale of the residence. Cali Decl. ¶ 10. While Cali may now try to sell the residence, the proceeds of any sale will remain frozen. Property License § II.

As to L.C., she is effectively barred from returning to her native country given the travel restrictions on her parents. Compl. ¶ 69. As a U.S. citizen, L.C. also faces per se civil or criminal liability under the Order for “any contribution or provision of funds, goods, or services by, to, or for the benefit of” her mother, Id. ¶ 72; E.O. 14203 § 3(a), subject to the exclusions listed in the Parental License. Plaintiffs allege these restrictions “impose an enormous chilling effect on L.C.’s mental well-being and constitutional rights.” Compl. ¶ 73.

Following her designation in July 2025, Albanese and Cali sought assistance from the United Nations in challenging defendants’ actions. See Cali Decl. ¶¶ 5–6, 9. Ultimately, however, the United Nations chose not to challenge Albanese’s designation through administrative or judicial process. Id. ¶ 25. Albanese also requested authorization to litigate the designation in her personal capacity. Id. ¶¶ 22, 25. The United Nations responded on January 14, 2026 that it was “not in a position to authorize [Albanese] to file suit in a United States court contesting the imposition of those sanctions.” Compl., Ex. E (“U.N. Letter”) [Dkt. #1-13]. One week later, plaintiffs authorized their attorneys to prepare this lawsuit. Cali Decl. ¶ 30.

II. This Lawsuit

On February 25, 2026, L.C., proceeding by and through her father, Cali, and Cali himself (collectively, “plaintiffs”) filed this lawsuit against President Trump, Attorney General Pamela Bondi, Secretary of the Treasury Scott Bessent, and Secretary of State Rubio (collectively, “defendants”). Compl. ¶¶ 11–16. Plaintiffs raise claims under the First Amendment, IEEPA, the Fourth Amendment, the Fifth Amendment, and the Administrative Procedure Act. Id. ¶¶ 75–101. The same day, plaintiffs filed a motion for a preliminary injunction. See Mot. for Prelim. Inj. [Dkt. #3]. Plaintiffs moved for preliminary injunctive relief, however, on their First Amendment and IEEPA claims alone. P.I. Br. at 3–4.

Following entry of a briefing schedule, see Minute Order (Mar. 4, 2026), defendants filed their opposition to plaintiffs’ motion on March 18, 2026, see Opp’n. Plaintiffs filed a motion for leave to file a supplemental declaration on March 24, 2026, see Mot. for Leave to File [Dkt. #30], which I granted, see Minute Order (Mar. 30, 2026). Plaintiffs filed their reply in support of their motion on March 25, 2026. See Reply in Supp. of Mot. for Prelim. Inj. (“Reply”) [Dkt. #32]. I held a hearing on April 1, 2026. See Tr. of Prelim. Inj. H’rg (“H’rg Tr.”) [Dkt. #35]. Plaintiffs’ motion for preliminary injunction is now ripe for decision.¹

¹ Following the hearing, plaintiffs sought to supplement the record with additional declarations, see Mot. to Suppl. Record [Dkt. #38]; Unopposed Mot. to Amend/Correct [Dkt. #40]; Consent Mot. to Suppl. Record [Dkt. #42], and later sought to file those supplemental declarations under seal, see Sealed Mot. for Leave to File Under Seal [Dkt. #43]. Defendants opposed the motion to supplement the record, see Mem. in Opp’n to Mot. to Suppl. Record [Dkt. #41], but consent to the sealing of the record, see Sealed Mot. for Leave to File Under Seal [Dkt. #43]. Both parties have sought leave to file replies and sur-replies in support

LEGAL STANDARD

A preliminary injunction is “an extraordinary remedy that may only be awarded upon a clear showing that the plaintiff is entitled to such relief.” Winter v. NRDC, Inc., 555 U.S. 7, 22 (2008). To obtain a preliminary injunction, the movant “must establish that he is likely to succeed on the merits, that he is likely to suffer irreparable harm in the absence of preliminary relief, that the balance of equities tips in his favor, and that an injunction is in the public interest.” Id. at 20.

I. Standing

Before addressing the merits of the preliminary injunction, I must first decide whether plaintiffs have standing to sue—a “threshold question in every federal case.” Warth v. Seldin, 422 U.S. 490, 498 (1975). Plaintiffs assert they have Article III standing and prudential standing to assert the First Amendment rights of Albanese. Defendants, not surprisingly, challenge plaintiffs’ standing on both grounds. I will discuss each in turn.

A. Article III Standing

To establish standing to sue, plaintiffs must show they have “(1) suffered an injury in fact, (2) that is fairly traceable to the challenged conduct of [defendants], and (3) that is likely to be redressed by a favorable judicial decision.” Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, 578 U.S. 330, 338 (2016). Plaintiffs must establish each element “with the manner and degree of evidence required at the successive stages of the litigation.” Lujan v. Defs. of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 561 (1992). Accordingly, on a motion for a preliminary injunction, plaintiffs must show a “substantial likelihood of standing.” Food & Water Watch, Inc. v. Vilsack, 808 F.3d 905, 913 (D.C. Cir. 2015).

of their respective positions. See Mot. for Leave to File Reply in Supp. of Mot. to Suppl. Record [Dkt. #45]; Unopposed Mot. for Leave to File Sur-Reply in Opp’n to Mot. to Suppl. Record [Dkt. #47]. These filings chiefly relate to plaintiffs’ efforts to clarify whether OFAC will permit plaintiffs to seek litigation funding from U.S. persons. Plaintiffs argue that OFAC’s determination supports their theory of Article III injury and irreparable harm. Ultimately, I need not reach this theory of harm to find in plaintiffs’ favor at this stage of the litigation. But in the interest of justice and for good cause shown, I will grant all motions to supplement and to file additional pleadings in support of or opposition to the same. I will also grant the motion to seal.

As to injury in fact, both plaintiffs—Cali and L.C.—suffer “concrete and particularized” harms as a result of Albanese’s designation under E.O. 14203. Lujan, 504 U.S. at 560. Common injuries sufficient for standing include “monetary injury,” “an injury to one’s property,” and “an injury to one’s constitutional rights.” FDA v. All. for Hippocratic Med., 602 U.S. 367, 381 (2024). Plaintiffs here, in one way or another, have demonstrated all three kinds of harm. How so?

For starters, Cali has suffered concrete harms to his property interest in his condominium in Washington, D.C. While OFAC has issued a narrow license permitting the upkeep and sale of the property, see Property License, the license allows only “U.S. persons” to care for the property—not Cali himself, id. § I. And the License requires all proceeds from any sale to be placed in an “interest-bearing blocked account,” id. § II, barring Cali from realizing his property’s economic value. These “impairment[s]” of Cali’s “property rights” are tangible legal injuries. Children’s Health Def. v. FCC, 25 F.4th 1045, 1049 (D.C. Cir. 2022).

L.C., an American citizen, has suffered “injury to [her] constitutional rights.” All. for Hippocratic Med., 602 U.S. at 381. Since Cali and Albanese are barred from entering the United States, see E.O. 14203 § 4, L.C., a minor, is effectively unable to travel to the United States. Reply at 15–16 (citing “strict, near universal regulatory restrictions on international travel by an unaccompanied minor”). As an American citizen, L.C. also faces potential criminal liability for any transactions with her mother. See E.O. 14203 § 3. The designation of her mother thus burdens L.C.’s “freedom of travel” as an American citizen, Aptheker v. Sec’y of State, 378 U.S. 500, 517 (1964), and burdens L.C.’s constitutional liberty interest in her familial relations, see Franz v. United States, 707 F.2d 582, 595 (D.C. Cir. 1983) (recognizing that “the freedom of a parent and child to maintain, cultivate, and mold their ongoing relationship” is “[a]mong the most important of the liberties” protected by the Constitution).

Undaunted, defendants point to the two limited licenses—the Property License and the Parental License—to argue that Cali and L.C. remain unharmed! Opp’n at 18–21. But these licenses apply only to “U.S. persons,” so they do not excuse Cali from the ramifications of Albanese’s designation. And there is no dispute that the Property License acts to freeze all proceeds from the sale of Cali’s property in Washington, DC by placing those proceeds in a “blocked account.” Property License § II; Cali Decl. ¶ 13. Even apart from the burdening of Cali’s property interests, that bare “economic harm is still an injury-in-fact for standing purposes.” Carpenters Indus. Council v. Zinke, 854 F.3d 1, 5 (D.C. Cir. 2017).

As for the Parental License, it is limited to transactions “ordinarily incident and necessary to [Albanese’s] role” as L.C.’s parent and guardian. Parental License § I (emphasis added). Defendants say the License helps “ensure that sanctions do not impede Albanese in her role as parent,” Rasmussen Decl. ¶ 9, and OFAC claims it would “generally view” incidental activities like Christmas gift exchanges or family travel as “authorized” by the License, id (emphasis added). Please! The existence of such a licensing scheme in the first place infringes the “constitutionally protected” “relationship between parent and child.” Troxel v. Granville, 530 U.S. 57, 66 (2000) (quoting Quilloin v. Walcott, 434 U.S. 246, 255 (1978)). Further, the Parental License on its face prohibits transactions that are incident but unnecessary to the parent-child relationship, and it is not clear from the record before me how plaintiffs would distinguish between necessary and unnecessary transactions in the context of their family relationships. To say the least, such “‘subtle . . . interference’ with protected liberties” is a cognizable injury no less than a “heavy-handed frontal attack[.]” First Choice Women’s Res. Ctrs., Inc. v. Davenport, 608 U.S. ---, 2026 WL 1153029, at *11 (2026) (quoting Bates v. City of Little Rock, 361 U.S. 516, 523 (1960)).²

These concrete harms are all “traceable” to defendants’ challenged action—the designation of Albanese under E.O. 14203—and “likely to be redressed by a favorable judicial decision.” Spokeo, 578 U.S. at 338. Defendants do not dispute these elements of the standing analysis. Indeed, a court order enjoining the designation of Albanese would remedy plaintiffs' harms. Accordingly, both plaintiffs have Article III standing to sue.

² Defendants point out, correctly, that plaintiffs have not sought clarification from OFAC as to the scope of the Parental License. See Opp’n at 19. But as defendants’ own submissions demonstrate, obtaining guidance from OFAC regarding specific transactions is no simple process. See Rasmussen Decl. ¶¶ 4, 7. Plaintiffs’ filings regarding their counsel’s repeated requests for clarification from OFAC regarding litigation funding prove the point. See Decl. of B. Brooks-Rubin [Dkt. #38-1] at ¶¶ 5–10 (describing weeks-long process of seeking clarification from OFAC regarding scope of general license before preparing application for specific license). L.C. should not have to retain a lawyer to determine whether she can buy her mother a gift.

B. Third Party Standing

Though they have Article III standing, plaintiffs ground their First Amendment claims in alleged violations of Albanese's rights, not their own. A plaintiff "generally must assert his own legal rights and interests, and cannot rest his claim to relief on the legal rights or interests of third parties." Kowalski v. Tesmer, 543 U.S. 125, 128–29 (2004) (quoting Warth, 422 U.S. at 499). Under some circumstances, however, third parties may have "standing to assert the rights of another." Id. at 129–30.

Courts weigh three prudential considerations in assessing third-party standing: "1) the plaintiff 'must have suffered an "injury in fact," thus giving him or her a "sufficiently concrete interest" in the outcome of the issue in dispute'; 2) the plaintiff 'must have a close relation to the third party'; and 3) 'there must exist some hindrance to the third party's ability to protect his or her own interests.'" Whitman-Walker Clinic, Inc. v. U.S. Dep't of Health & Hum. Servs., 485 F. Supp. 3d 1, 34 (D.D.C. 2020) (quoting Powers v. Ohio, 499 U.S. 400, 411 (1991)).

Plaintiffs satisfy each requirement. First, plaintiffs themselves have suffered constitutional and economic injuries of their own, as described above. Second, there is a "close relation" and "identity of interests" between plaintiffs and Albanese such that plaintiffs can "act as . . . effective advocate[s]" for Albanese's rights. Lepelletier v. FDIC, 164 F.3d 37, 44 (D.C. Cir. 1999). There can be no dispute as to the closeness of the relationship; Albanese is Cali's husband and L.C.'s mother. Indeed, defendants acknowledge that “much of [plaintiffs’] requested relief would run directly to Albanese’s benefit.” Opp’n at 16.

Finally, Albanese is hindered in her ability to challenge her designation. To satisfy this requirement, plaintiffs “need only show that ‘there is some impediment to [Albanese]’s ability to assert [her] own legal rights.’” Turner v. U.S. Agency for Glob. Media, 502 F. Supp. 3d 333, 362 (D.D.C. 2020) (quoting Al-Aulaqi v. Obama, 727 F. Supp. 2d 1, 31 (D.D.C. 2010)). Already a “lenient standard,” id., the hindrance threshold is even more “relaxed” in First Amendment cases, Wilmer Cutler Pickering Hale & Dorr LLP v. Exec. Off. of President, 784 F. Supp. 3d 127, 146 (D.D.C. 2025). Its purpose is merely “to ensure ‘that the rightholder did not simply decline to bring the claim on his own behalf, but could not in fact do so.’” Al-Aulaqi, 727 F. Supp. 2d at 32 (quoting Miller v. Albright, 523 U.S. 420, 450 (1998) (O’Connor, J., concurring)).

Given her position as a U.N. Special Rapporteur and because she is subject to institutional immunity, Albanese must obtain explicit permission from the U.N. before bringing lawsuits in her own name. See Reply at 23; U.N. Letter at 2 (noting that the Secretary-General has the sole “right” to “waive the immunity” of U.N. experts like Albanese). Albanese sought permission from the U.N. to challenge her designation but was denied. Compl. ¶ 74; U.N. Letter at 2. Courts have found the hindrance requirement satisfied by far less concrete barriers, including a “financial disincentive to litigate” and “a party’s desire to protect her personal privacy.” Al-Aulaqi, 727 F. Supp. 2d at 31 (citing cases). In First Amendment cases especially, a “serious risk” to “career[s] and professional li[ves]” and a mere “danger of chilled speech” have been enough. Turner, 502 F. Supp. 3d at 362 (citations omitted). This however is not, as defendants claim, a case where the party “could have brought suit on [her] own behalf, but . . . simply declined to do so.” Al-Aulaqi, 727 F. Supp. 2d at 32. Instead, plaintiffs have demonstrated that Albanese’s ability to assert her rights in court was sufficiently impeded.

Accordingly, plaintiffs have standing in their own right and standing to assert the First Amendment rights of Albanese. I now turn to plaintiffs’ arguments on the merits.

II. Likelihood of Success on the Merits

To obtain a preliminary injunction, plaintiffs must demonstrate a strong likelihood of success on the merits. Plaintiffs raise three grounds in their motion: (1) E.O. 14203 violates the First Amendment on its face and as applied to Albanese; (2) E.O. 14203 violates the Berman Amendments to IEEPA; and (3) E.O. 14203 violates IEEPA’s statutory limits on the President’s sanctions authority. P.I. Br. at 3–4. Because I find that plaintiffs are likely to succeed on their First Amendment claim, I need not reach their statutory claims.

A. Applicability of the First Amendment

I must first consider whether the First Amendment protects the speech of Albanese, a non-citizen, while speaking outside the United States. Foreign nationals outside the territory of the United States do not, as a general matter, “possess rights under the U.S. Constitution.” Agency for Int’l Dev. v. All. for Open Soc’y Int’l, Inc., 591 U.S. 430, 433 (2020). Things change, however, when a foreign national “come[s] within the territory of the United States and develop[s] substantial connections with this country.” United States v. Verdugo-Urquidez, 494 U.S. 259, 271 (1990). Whether a foreign national has sufficient connections to the United States to garner protection under our Constitution is, in the final analysis, a “fact-dependent, case-by-case assessment.” Olenga v. Gacki, 507 F. Supp. 3d 260, 274 (D.D.C. 2020).

Though it has never articulated any “definitive” criteria, our Circuit has often “looked to the presence of property as the benchmark for satisfying the ‘substantial connections’ test.” Kadi v. Geithner, 42 F. Supp. 3d 1, 25–26 (D.D.C. 2012). For example, our Circuit found sufficient connections when a foreign organization had an “overt presence” in a D.C. office building and a “small bank account” in the United States. Nat’l Council of Resistance of Iran v. Dep’t of State, 251 F.3d 192, 201 (D.C. Cir. 2001) (“NCOR”) (citation omitted). Courts have also found substantial connections where a noncitizen held U.S. visas, maintained a residence in the United States, owned companies in the United States, and owned property in the United States that was blocked as a result of the challenged designation. López Bello v. Smith, 651 F. Supp. 3d 20, 38 (D.D.C. 2022), aff’d sub nom., Bello v. Gacki, 94 F.4th 1067 (D.C. Cir. 2024). On the other hand, our Circuit found insufficient connections where two foreign organizations did not “possess[] any controlling interest in property located within the United States.” 32 Cnty. Sovereignty Comm. v. Dep’t of State, 292 F.3d 797, 799 (D.C. Cir. 2002).

Here, Albanese has “substantial connections” to the United States. Verdugo-Urquidez, 494 U.S. at 271. From 2012 to 2015, Albanese lived in the United States. Compl. ¶¶ 18–20. During that time, she bought—and she still owns—property in the United States. Id.; Kadi, 42 F. Supp. 3d at 26 (“presence of property” is the “benchmark”). As a property owner, Albanese has a mortgage with a U.S. financial institution and pays

U.S. property taxes. Compl. ¶ 18; Reply at 7. In addition, Albanese has a U.S. citizen daughter, was affiliated with several U.S. universities before the imposition of sanctions, and frequently travels to the United States for professional obligations and speaking engagements—including professional engagements that were cancelled as a result of Albanese’s designation. Reply at 7–8. These connections are substantial enough to grant Albanese “at least some” protections under our Constitution. Kadi, 42 F. Supp. 3d at 26.

Defendants’ arguments to the contrary are, to say the least, unpersuasive! Defendants point out that Albanese is not physically present in the United States and that none of Albanese’s “relevant expression took place in the United States.” Opp’n at 26. Defendants chiefly rely on NCOR, which relied, in part, on a foreign organization’s “overt presence” in a D.C. office building to conclude that the organization had substantial connections. 251 F.3d at 201–02. But the organization’s physical presence was not the only factor considered by the NCOR court. *Id.*³ And, as other cases teach, physical presence within the United States is not a necessary condition for constitutional protections. See Russian Volunteer Fleet v. United States, 282 U.S. 481, 489, 491 (1931) (foreign corporation with property in the United States was protected by Fifth Amendment); Ibrahim v. Dep’t of Homeland Sec., 669 F.3d 983, 994–97 (9th Cir. 2012) (foreign national with substantial connections could bring First Amendment challenge to No-Fly List designation despite not being physically present in United States). Rather, our Circuit has looked to a foreign national's "presence or property" in the United States to determine the scope of that foreign national's rights. People's Mojahedin Org. of Iran v. Dep't of State, 327 F.3d 1238, 1241 (D.C. Cir. 2003) (emphasis added) (citing NCOR, 251 F.3d at 201–02); see also 32 Cnty. Sovereignty Comm., 292 F.3d at 799.

³ The reasoning in NCOR was also based on “classified information” that confirmed the organization’s substantial connections to the United States. 251 F.3d at 202. Moreover, NCOR did not purport to announce strict requirements for what counts as “substantial.” See id. (“In any event, we are not undertaking to determine, as a general matter, how ‘substantial’ an alien’s connections with this country must be to merit the protections of the Due Process Clause or any other part of the Constitution. Rather, we have reviewed the entire record including the classified information and determine that NCRI can rightly lay claim to having come within the territory of the United States and developed substantial connections with this country.”).

Here, while the speech at issue occurred outside the United States, defendants have responded by taking action against Albanese's extensive connections to the United States—including Albanese's property within the United States and her ability to maintain professional and personal connections within the United States—because of her speech. Accordingly, Albanese (or plaintiffs standing in her shoes) may claim the protection of the First Amendment to challenge defendants' actions. Kadi, 42 F. Supp. 3d at 26.

B. First Amendment Analysis

The First Amendment forbids the Government from "abridging the freedom of speech." U.S. Const. amend. I. In evaluating whether a government regulation of speech violates the First Amendment, courts distinguish between regulations that are "content based" and those that are "content neutral." Reed v. Town of Gilbert, 576 U.S. 155, 165–66 (2015). A regulation of speech is "content based" if it targets speech "based on its communicative content" or "because of the topic discussed or the idea or message expressed." Id. at 163. Content-neutral regulations, by contrast, "serve[] purposes unrelated to the content of expression." Ward v. Rock Against Racism, 491 U.S. 781, 791 (1989). Where a regulation targets speech based on its content, the regulation is “presumptively unconstitutional” and will survive First Amendment scrutiny only if it is “narrowly tailored to serve compelling state interests.” Reed, 576 U.S. at 163.

Plaintiffs challenge E.O. 14203 as unconstitutional on its face and as applied to Albanese. I will first consider whether the order is “valid as applied” to avoid addressing “an overbreadth issue unnecessarily.” Renne v. Geary, 501 U.S. 312, 324 (1991) (quoting Bd. of Trs. of State Univ. of N.Y. v. Fox, 492 U.S. 469, 484–85 (1989)); see also Sandvig v. Sessions, 315 F. Supp. 3d 1, 28 (D.D.C. 2018) (“[F]acial challenges are disfavored when a case ‘may be disposed of on narrower grounds.’” (quoting Texas v. Johnson, 491 U.S. 397, 403 n.3 (1989))).

To begin, Secretary Rubio’s designation of Albanese under E.O. 14203 plainly regulates Albanese’s speech. Secretary Rubio’s statement asserts that Albanese “directly engaged with the [ICC] in efforts to investigate, arrest, detain, or prosecute nationals of the United States or Israel” by “recommending that the ICC . . . issue arrest warrants targeting” Israeli officials and by “recommending the ICC pursue investigation and prosecutions” of American companies. Rubio Statement at 1–2 (emphasis added). Albanese does not work for the ICC, nor does she have any ability to direct action by the ICC. Compl. ¶ 31; Hr’g Tr. at 19:7–20. As such, the only way Albanese has engaged in any ICC effort to “investigate, arrest, detain, or prosecute a protected person,” E.O. 14203 § I(a)(ii)(A), is by offering her non-binding opinion and recommendation—in other words, by speaking!

Not only do defendants seek to regulate Albanese’s speech, they want to regulate her speech because of the “idea or message expressed,” Reed, 576 U.S. at 163, as well as because of “its function or purpose,” TikTok Inc. v. Garland, 604 U.S. 56, 71 (2025). As a Southern District of New York colleague held in enjoining the predecessor to E.O. 14203, the Order restricts speech “if, and only if, it has the function or purpose of benefitting [the ICC]. This is content-based restriction.” Open Soc’y Just. Initiative v. Trump, 510 F. Supp. 3d 198, 211 (S.D.N.Y. 2021).

Defendants argue that E.O. 14203 as applied to Albanese is a regulation of conduct, not speech. Opp’n at 32; Hr’g Tr. at 25:19–20 (Albanese designated as SDN “because of her conduct”). E.O. 14203 penalizes anyone who “directly engaged” in ICC efforts to “investigate, arrest, detain, or prosecute” protected persons. E.O. 14203 § I(a)(ii)(A). Even if E.O. 14203 “generally functions as a regulation of conduct,” it “was directed at [Albanese] because of what [her] speech communicated.” Holder v. Humanitarian L. Project, 561 U.S. 1, 27–28 (2010) (citing Cohen v. California, 403 U.S. 15, 18–19 (1971)). Put differently, the “conduct triggering” the application of E.O. 14203 to Albanese was her nonbinding recommendation that the ICC take action against U.S. and Israeli nationals—nothing more than “communicating a message” with which defendants disagree. Id. at 28.

Nor can it be argued that E.O. 14203 as applied to Albanese has a mere “incidental effect on speech.” Opp’n at 32. Albanese’s designation does not “serve[] purposes unrelated to the content of expression.” Ward, 491 U.S. at 791. Rather, the “principle justification” for her designation, id. at 791, is to “respond” to the expression of opinions that defendants think “extreme,” Rubio Statement at 2. If Albanese instead opposed ICC action against U.S. and Israeli nationals, she would not have been designated under E.O. 14203. Thus, the effect of Albanese’s designation is to “punish” and thereby “suppress disfavored expression.” NRA v. Vullo, 602 U.S. 175, 188 (2024).

Because E.O. 14203 as applied to Albanese is a content-based regulation of speech, it is “presumptively unconstitutional and may be justified only if the government proves that [it is] narrowly tailored to serve compelling state interests.” Reed, 576 U.S. at 163. To be narrowly tailored, defendants must “demonstrate that [their actions] do[] not ‘unnecessarily circumscrib[e] protected expression.’” Republican Party of Minn. v. White, 536 U.S. 765, 775 (2002) (third alteration in original) (quoting Brown v. Hartlage, 456 U.S. 45, 54 (1982)).

Defendants’ asserted compelling interest is “upholding the sovereignty of the United States” and safeguarding the foreign policy interests of the United States and its allies by protecting them from “investigation, arrest, detention, and prosecution by the ICC.” Opp’n at 29. Of course, “concerns of national security and foreign relations do not warrant abdication of the judicial role.” Holder, 561 U.S. at 34. But even assuming the validity of defendants’ stated interests, the sanctioning of Albanese under E.O. 14203 is hardly “narrowly tailored” to further those ends. Reed, 576 U.S. at 163.

By sanctioning Albanese under E.O. 14203, defendants are punishing Albanese for merely recommending that the ICC prosecute certain individuals—a non-binding opinion that does not compel any action on the part of the ICC. As the Supreme Court put it when distinguishing speech from non-speech, “independently advocating for a cause is different from providing a service.” Holder, 561 U.S. at 24. Defendants’ own statements demonstrate that independent advocacy is at the heart of the sanctions against Albanese! Because Albanese’s designation under E.O. 14203 “unnecessarily circumscribe[es]” her “protected expression,” it violates the First Amendment. White, 536 U.S. at 775 (quoting Brown, 456 U.S. at 54).

III. Irreparable Harm

Plaintiffs must also demonstrate irreparable harm. To warrant a preliminary injunction, the risk of injury must be “both certain and great, actual and not theoretical, beyond remediation, and of such imminence that there is a clear and present need for equitable relief to prevent irreparable harm.” Mexichem Specialty Resins, Inc. v. EPA, 787 F.3d 544, 555 (D.C. Cir. 2015) (cleaned up). Though sufficient to convey standing, “economic loss does not, in and of itself, constitute irreparable harm” because it may be remedied by compensatory relief at a later date. Id. (quoting Wisconsin Gas Co. v. FERC, 758 F.2d 669, 674 (D.C. Cir. 1985)). But the “violation of a constitutional right,” whether ongoing or prospective, “constitutes irreparable injury for purposes of seeking equitable relief.” Karem v. Trump, 960 F.3d 656, 667 (D.C. Cir. 2020) (cleaned up) (quoting Gordon v. Holder, 721 F.3d 638, 653 (D.C. Cir. 2013)).

As a result of Defendants’ actions, Plaintiffs are and will be irreparably harmed in the absence of an injunction. To begin, defendants’ actions burden L.C.’s “freedom of travel” as an American citizen, a constitutionally protected liberty interest. Aptheke, 378 U.S. at 517. E.O. 14203 bars “immigrant and nonimmigrant entry” to the United States by “immediate family members” of SDNs, E.O. 14203 § 4, including a “spouse or child” of an SDN, id. § 8(f). That restriction plainly applies to Cali, who is not a U.S. citizen. And while not expressly forbidden by E.O. 14203, L.C. is effectively barred from entering her country of citizenship and native birth because of the strict travel restrictions on her father and mother. Such restrictions irreparably burden her constitutional rights as an American! Aptheker, 378 U.S. at 517.

Further, the designation impairs the Cali family's property rights in their D.C. home, as described above. See supra part I.A. While purely monetary harms are compensable by damages and typically not irreparable, "unauthorized interference with a real property interest constitutes irreparable harm as a matter of law" since real property is a "unique commodity for which a monetary remedy for injury is an inherently inadequate substitute." Watson v. Perdue, 410 F. Supp. 3d 122, 131 (D.D.C. 2019) (quoting Shvartser v. Lekser, 308 F. Supp. 3d 260, 267 (D.D.C. 2018)). As such, defendants' interference with Cali's rights in real property also inflicts irreparable harm.

Further still, defendants' actions burden L.C.'s constitutionally protected interests in familial relations. See supra part I.A; Franz, 707 F.2d at 595. Cali and L.C. face potential felony liability for interacting with or transacting business with Albanese, in violation of the "constitutional protection" afforded the "creation and sustenance of a family," including "the raising and education of children." Roberts v. U.S. Jaycees, 468 U.S. 609, 619 (1984); see also Jacinto-Castanon de Nolasco v. U.S. Immigr. & Customs Enf't, 319 F. Supp. 3d 491, 499 (D.D.C. 2018) (discussing "fundamental liberty interest in family integrity"). The existence of a limited license does not cure that harm. The Parental License applies only to "U.S. Persons," not Albanese herself, and covers only transactions "ordinarily incident and necessary" to Albanese's role as "parent and legal guardian" of L.C, see Parental License § I, not all interactions between Albanese and her daughter. The burdening of L.C.’s constitutional right to “maintain, cultivate, and mold [her] ongoing relationship” with her mother is irreparable harm. Franz, 707 F.2d at 595.

Defendants argue that plaintiffs cannot satisfy this element because they have not submitted any evidence to support their alleged harms. See Opp’n at 13, 23. While the movant for a preliminary injunction bears the burden of establishing each element by a “clear showing,” Cobell v. Norton, 391 F.3d 251, 258 (D.C. Cir. 2004), the Court may accept as true any “factual averments” that defendants “do not contest,” Pantoja v. Martinez, 567 F. Supp. 3d 76, 78 n.1 (D.D.C. 2021). And as to plaintiffs’ allegations about how E.O. 14203 and Albanese’s designation affects them—by burdening L.C.’s entry into the United States, freezing the family’s property assets, and chilling their familial relations—defendants do not contest a thing. Defendants offer differing interpretations of how OFAC may “generally view” certain hypothetical scenarios, see Rasmussen Decl. ¶ 9, but they offer no response to plaintiffs’ specific factual allegations of harm, see Cali Decl. ¶¶ 10, 13–18 (alleging harms due to property and travel restrictions). I will not deny plaintiffs’ motion on the sole basis that they did not submit an affidavit in support of their asserted harms.⁴

Defendants further argue that plaintiffs’ delay in seeking a preliminary injunction undermines their claims of irreparable harm. Opp’n at 13–15. To be sure, a plaintiff’s lengthy delay in seeking court intervention may “undercut[] its asserted harms.” Fla. EB5

Invs., LLC v. Wolf, 443 F. Supp. 3d 7, 13 (D.D.C. 2020). But a delay in filing, standing alone, “is not a proper basis” for denying a preliminary injunction. Gordon, 632 F.3d at 724. Here, any delay is minimal and excusable! Defendants designated Albanese in July 2025, see Rubio Statement, and plaintiffs immediately sought assistance from the United Nations in challenging the designation, see Cali Decl. ¶¶ 4–6. In January 2026, the United Nations advised that it would not permit Albanese to file suit individually. U.N. Letter. Plaintiffs filed this lawsuit roughly a month later. Cali Decl. ¶ 33; Compl. (filed on February 25, 2026). Since plaintiffs were in “diligent pursuit” of other avenues of redress, Texas Children’s Hosp. v. Burwell, 76 F. Supp. 3d 224, 245 (D.D.C. 2014), their modest delay in turning to the federal courts does not undercut their asserted harms.⁵

IV. The Balance of the Equities and the Public Interest

The balance of the equities and the public interest cut in plaintiffs’ favor. Where the Government is the opposing party, these factors merge and the court “weigh[s] the benefits to the private party from obtaining an injunction against the harms to the government and the public from being enjoined.” Doe v. Mattis, 928 F.3d 1, 23 (D.C. Cir. 2019).

On one side of the ledger, plaintiffs face real, tangible harms as a result of Albanese’s designation. See supra part III. On the other hand, defendants’ sanctioning of Albanese for her speech is overbroad. The stated purpose of E.O. 14207 is to meet the “extraordinary threat” posed by the ICC’s efforts to “investigate, arrest, detain, or prosecute protected persons” by sanctioning foreign nationals who have “directly engaged” in those efforts. E.O. 14207 § 1(a)(ii)(A). But Albanese has done nothing more than speak! It is undisputed that her recommendations have no binding effect on the ICC’s actions—they are nothing more than her opinion. Enjoining such a “vastly overinclusive” sanctions policy does defendants no harm. Brown v. Ent. Merchs. Ass’n, 564 U.S. 786, 804 (2011).

Finally, protecting the freedom of speech is “always” in the public interest. Pursuing Am.’s Greatness v. FEC, 831 F.3d 500, 511 (D.C. Cir. 2016). That is so even when an individual’s views are “hurtful,” “caustic,” or “even outrageous,” Snyder v. Phelps, 562 U.S. 443, 458 (2011) (citations omitted), as defendants clearly believe Albanese’s speech to be, see Rubio Statement at 1–2 (labeling Albanese’s speech as “biased and malicious,” “antisemiti[c],” and “extreme”). Indeed, the “proudest boast” of our First Amendment is that it protects the freedom to express even “the thought that we hate.” Matal v. Tam, 582 U.S. 218, 246 (2017) (quoting United States v. Schwimmer, 279 U.S. 644, 655 (1929) (Holmes, J., dissenting)). Enough said.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, it is hereby ORDERED that Plaintiffs’ Motion for a Preliminary Injunction [Dkt. #3] is GRANTED. An accompanying order will issue contemporaneously with this opinion.
