Case No. 25-cv-02847-AMO

ORDER GRANTING MOTION TO ENFORCE PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION

Re: Dkt. No. 166

Plaintiffs’ motion to enforce the preliminary injunction was heard before this Court on August 6, 2026. Having read the papers filed by the parties and carefully considered their arguments therein and those made at the hearing, as well as the relevant legal authority, and good cause appearing, the Court GRANTS Plaintiffs’ motion for the following reasons.

The Court largely assumes familiarity with the facts and procedural history of the case for purposes of this Order. Most significantly, on April 29, 2025, this Court issued a preliminary injunction that enjoined Defendants “from withdrawing the services or funds provided by the Office of Refugee Resettlement (‘ORR’) as of March 20, 2025, under the [TVPPRA] and ORR’s Foundational Rule, 45 C.F.R. § 410.1309(a)(4), particularly ORR’s provision of funds for direct legal representation services to unaccompanied children,” and precluded Defendants from “cutting off access to congressionally appropriated funding for its duration.” Dkt. No. 87 at 28. Plaintiffs contend Defendants have failed to comply with the preliminary injunction. See Dkt. No. 166.

“Federal courts are not reduced to issuing injunctions . . . and hoping for compliance.” Frew ex rel. Frew v. Hawkins, 540 U.S. 431, 440 (2004) (citation omitted). Courts “have inherent power to enforce compliance with their lawful orders.” Spallone v. United States, 493 U.S. 265,

276 (1990) (citation omitted). While a court may grant a motion to enforce when the order’s text has been violated, the Ninth Circuit has also instructed that “it is proper to observe the objectives for which the relief was granted and to find a breach of the decree in a violation of the spirit of the injunction, even though its strict letter may not have been disregarded.” Inst. of Cetacean Research v. Sea Shepherd Conservation Soc., 774 F.3d 935, 949 (9th Cir. 2014).

Here, Defendants concede that they have withheld funds appropriated for direct legal representation services to unaccompanied minors since December 2025 and continue to do so. See Debany Decl. (Dkt. No. 169-1) ¶¶ 25-31. Defendants’ ongoing conditioning of disbursement of required funding inevitably results in “cutting off access to congressionally appropriated funding” for “direct legal representation services to unaccompanied children.” Dkt. No. 87 at 28 (preliminary injunction). This violates both the plain language as well as the spirit of the preliminary injunction, as maintaining the funding of legal representation for unaccompanied minors in accordance with the TVPRA and the Foundational Rule is the preliminary injunction’s objective. See Inst. of Cetacean Research, 774 F.3d at 949.

Defendants advance that they continue to withhold the funds based on a dispute with non-party Acacia regarding contract terms enforcement and “invoice substantiation concerns.” Dkt. No. 169 at 3-4. Defendants’ contract argument reflects yet another attempt to transform this Administrative Procedures Act case into a contract case. The Court has rejected that attempt multiple times.¹ See, e.g., Dkt. No. 33 at 3 (“Contrary to the Government’s assertions, this is not a contract dispute”); Dkt. No. 75 at 4; Dkt. No. 87 at 11-15. The Ninth Circuit has also already rejected that argument. See Cmty. Legal Servs. in East Palo Alto, et al. v. U.S. Dep’t of Health and Human Servs., et al., Case No. 25-2808, Dkt. No. 17.1 at 5-10 (9th Cir. May 14, 2025). And in so arguing, Defendants tie themselves in a knot – despite their insistence that this Court lacks jurisdiction over the government’s contractual disputes, they now attempt to utilize a contractual dispute as a shield for their failure to abide by the terms of the preliminary injunction. The Court

¹ The Court similarly rejects Defendants’ other attempts to relitigate other aspects of the preliminary injunction, like a bond requirement, in the course of opposing the motion to enforce. See Dkt. No. 169 at 10-11.

1 declines to interfere with the government’s contract with Acacia and instead expects the 2 government to comply with clear Court orders compelling the government’s compliance with the 3 TVPRA and ORR’s Foundational Rule.

4 Therefore, the Court GRANTS Plaintiffs’ motion to enforce the preliminary injunction. In 5 accordance with the government’s previously-selected method of complying with the preliminary
6 injunction by contracting with Acacia, e.g., Dkt. No. 45, the Court ORDERS Defendants to issue
7 and release the funds they have withheld since December 2025. Defendants may not condition
8 compliance with this Order on receipt of any further information from Acacia, as imposing 9 additional conditions for issuance of payment at this stage would be an end run around the 10 injunction that the Court must reject. See City and County of San Francisco v. Trump, 782 F.
11 Supp. 3d 830, 836 (N.D. Cal. 2025). In light of the representation that the “funding to pay CLIN
12 2 invoices remains available for immediate disbursement,” Debany Decl. ¶ 31, the Court
13 ORDERS Defendants to release the funds by noon PST on Friday, August 7, 2026. The Court
14 ORDERS Defendants to file a declaration certifying that the withheld funds have been released by 15 no later than 1:00 p.m. PST the same day.

16 Finally, the Court notes that Defendants’ selected method for complying with the 17 preliminary injunction – the contract with Acacia – expired July 31, 2026. Debany Decl. ¶ 33.
18 Consequently, it appears to the Court that no mechanism presently exists by which Defendants are 19 complying with the preliminary injunction. Perhaps anticipating this concern, Defendants
20 submitted a subsequent declaration from Debany describing some efforts to execute new 21 agreements for the legal services at the heart of this lawsuit. See Dkt. No. 171. Debany’s 22 supplemental declaration raises more questions than it provides answers, for example describing 23 two agreements recently reached for a seeming fraction of the legal services to be provided across 24 the country. The declaration does not sufficiently detail Defendants’ efforts to comply with the 25 preliminary injunction in the coming weeks and months. Accordingly, the Court ORDERS
26 Defendants to file a report detailing their current and ongoing compliance with the preliminary
27 injunction following expiration of the contract with Acacia. As a reminder, the TVPRA requires
28 that the government “shall ensure, to the greatest extent practicable,” that all unaccompanied

1 minors receive legal “counsel to represent them in legal proceedings” and to “protect them from
2 mistreatment, exploitation, and trafficking.” 8 U.S.C. § 1232(c)(5). Defendants’ report shall 3 evidence their compliance. Defendants shall file the report by no later than noon PST on 4 Thursday, August 13, 2026.
